HISTORY This brickworks was built in the 1950s using kiln technology that dates from the 19th century.

The two characteristic oval plan Hoffman brick kilns with battered lower walls, seven bays long, each with high brick circular section chimney are the main feature of the site. The kilns, which are gas fired, have particularly large wicket gates, built to accommodate forklifts.

It could be compared to the Hoffman kilns at the former Box Hill brickworks site and at the Clifton Brick site in Brunswick; however both these sites are far earlier.
