HISTORY

"Fermanagh" was built for Otto Leber and his family, orchardists [88].

"Fermanagh" is a double-fronted, symmetrical timber Italianate house, with timber mock ashlar decoration at the front. It has a hip-roofed verandah, which has continuous lace brackets and valance between timber posts, and the frieze has bracket pairs, with panels between. The fence and garden plantings are significant.

It is intact and in good condition although under threat of redevelopment.

Architecturally, this building can be compared to (for example) site nos. 212.01; 174.4; 173.26; 174.16 and 214.14.
