HISTORY A triple-fronted, hip-roofed Edwardian timber house, transitional to Californian Bungalow style. Minor gables project to the right-hand front and left-hand side, and there is a further hip-roofed rear wing. The upper gables are timbered roughcast. The bargeboards have carved pendants in the manner of Japanese bungalows of the 1920s. The 1950s is unsympathetic.

No information is currently available on the history of this building.

Architecturally some comparisons include 330 Cotham Road, Kew (recently demolished 1990) c1923, 34 Elliott Avenue, Balwyn (1924) and 30 Laurel Bank Parade, Newtown.
