GRAND HOTEL

Place No. 18

ADDRESS	112 Yarra Street			Last Update 19/04/2005
	Warrandyte
DESCRIPTION	A much altered building, this double-storied, hip-roofed, six-bay hotel building is a major landmark in the Warrandyte township. The timber double-storey verandah has a hipped-roof, wit gables facing over the end bays. The roof has Marseilles terracotta tiles, the far chimneys have decorative brick string courses and terracotta pots, and the verandah has a cast-iron lace valance.

HISTORY	The Grand Hotel was constructed in 1895-6, replacing the Andersons Creek Hotel (on the same site). It was owned by Francis Tresize in 1908, and the hotel continued in the family until the 1960s.[1]
	Larger Victorian hotels usually incorporated at least two separate 'bars' or rooms for drinking in, each affording a difference level of comfort and/or privacy. The ground floor interior of the Warrandyte Hotel remains largely unaltered in its plan form, with a central corridor flanked by a public bar and a lounge bar. The lounge bar retains an original or early bar counter and fittings.
	The hotel was altered in the 1960s, with the enclosing of the ground floor verandah, construction of a drive-in bottle sales area and extensions to the rear.
	The hotel can be compared to Healesville "Grand" Hotel, and the Home Hotel (Launching Place) and the Wine Hall.
