HISTORY A group of Italian migrants were assisted to migrate to Australia by Hugh Clifford, grateful for the personal assistance they had provided to him during the war.[1]

A group of seven men are thought to have migrated together, initially sharing a small dwelling before being joined by wives/families a year or so later. A daughter of one of these families recalls a small house, packing sheds and market gardens on the riverflats.[1]

The land is now Crown Land, presumably part of Warrandyte State Park.
